KILN-DRIED > SEASONED

Leaving oak logs outside to air-dry for 12+ months (the process of seasoning) does not prevent some rot from setting in - resulting in mold growth, fungi colonies or even pest infestations.

Axe & Kindle kiln-dries all of its oak firewood. This means we remove moisture by using a super-sized kiln and fan to heat and dry the logs all at once. The controlled environment within the kiln makes it possible to get the wood below 20% moisture every time. Your fire will light easier and burn longer, brighter and with less smoke than a fire using seasoned wood.

GREAT FOR COOKING

Enjoy an amazing smokey flavor on your grilled or smoked dishes with our oak firewood.

Oak firewood produces a mildly sweet aroma and flavor, adding subtle notes of smokiness to whatever you're grilling or smoking. This enhances the natural flavors in your food without overpowering them like some other types of wood can do.

Get ready for satisfied guests asking what makes the food so delicious. The taste of your food cooked over mixed hardwood will leave your customers, friends, and family wanting more!

OUR PROCESS

We select only top-quality oak that's perfect for your campfire or fireplace. Our local suppliers ensure that each piece is sourced fresh and then goes through a rigorous kiln-drying process - so it's guaranteed not to have started decomposing yet, retaining its hard-dense composition.
